

Dear Chairman Powell and members of the FCC:

I feel compelled to write to you and to urge you to postpone the decision on further deregulation of the media. This is a matter that is too serious and farreaching in its implications for the American consumer, since it would open the door to consolidation which undoubtedly would limit objective information even further. Already, many channels seem to be carbon copies of each other, broadcasting the same message; with true and objective information hard to come by. Congress, with input from its constituents, needs to have time for a thorough discussion on all aspects of this ominous ruling before any final decision is made. I expect you to do everything in your power to make this possible. Democracy is too precious to get careless with. Sincerely, Monika Apathy
